Article: India Heat Wave

NEW DELHI — One of India's longest and most intense heat waves in decades, with temperatures reaching 123 degrees, has claimed at least 36 lives since it began in May, and the government has warned that the suffering might continue as the arrival of monsoon rains has been delayed.

India's heat waves have grown particularly intense in the past decade, as climate change has intensified around the world, killing thousands of people, and affecting an increasing number of states. This year, the extreme temperatures have struck large parts of northern and central India, with Rajasthan, Madhya Pradesh, Uttar Pradesh, and Maharashtra among the worst-hit states. Even being indoors does not give relief from severe heat.

The worst affected by this "severe heat wave", a condition when the temperature hovers above 47 degrees, were those people, who cannot afford air conditioners or coolers, or even remain inside their houses during the day.
